THAT ABANDONED BABY.

Details of the Mothers Movements.

(Special Telegram to the News.)

CORRIGAN, Sept. 16.—The woman who placed her child in a carpet-sack and left it on the Central train last Friday morning, got aboard at that place. She came here about five months ago from Wellborn or Bryan, accompanied by a little boy, and is the wife of a man named Fisher, who was killed down there a year or two ago. She was known here by the name of Lizzie Merritt, and since her arrival here had been boarding with one of our best citizens, living about ten miles in the country, during which time she has conducted herself in a perfectly lady-like manner. The child was just four weeks old when she left here. She came in town with the little boy and baby on Thursday morning and went to Cummings' photograph gallery, where she had a picture taken of the baby, saying she never expected to raise it, and wanted a good picture. She bought the satchel in which she afterwards deposited the baby at Baum's dry goods store. She left here on the 10 p. m. train with the baby and the little boy. One of our citizens, en route for Austin, to attend the Grand Lodge, went on the same train. He noticed the woman acted strangely, and watched her. Just before reaching Hearne he saw her put the child in the satchel, and as the train stopped she jerked up the satchel and hurried off the cars, with her little boy. She passed through both sitting rooms at the depot, but finding no good opportunity to deposit the satchel unobserved, returned with it and resumed her seat.

A monument to the Confederate dead was unveiled September 3d, at Danville, Virginia.
